Miss Carrie Hill, of Beaver Dam, N. Y., who has been visiting relatives here, returned to her home.

Mr. Fred Billman and wife, Mr. Edward Kimball and Rev. J. A. Wiegand spent a day of last week at Montgomery, N. Y. Our popular shoemaker, Mr. Borgwardt is still absent from his shop on River street on account of sickness. He is however convalescent.

Mr. A. W. Balch, one of our most prosperous business men, moved into his beautiful as well as comfortable new home yesterday. He has great reasons to feel proud of it.

LAYTON.

(Special Correspondence to the Press.) LAYTON, Oct. 21.—An able political leader once remarked to me when I was far from home, "Sandyston? yes I have heard of Sandyston; away up in the mountains of Sussex is it not yes, yes, I have heard of it. I have been told it can get up a bigger fight, in the least time, and spend the most money at it of any township in New Jersey. Yes it beats them all." But Sandyston is as quiet as an oyster these days, and unless Klutner throws his coat, it does not appear now as if anything short of Gabriel's trumpet could even get an echo in this dull old town. The memory of those lively days come back to us though, as fragrant as the odor of new mown hay, and will they ever come again? Perhaps, somewhere in the sweet bye and bye.

On Monday morning Bert Westbrook, and Geo. Millsbaugh, practical painters and decorators from Port Jervis, commenced to give the finishing touches to the interior of the Reformed church at Bevana. When they are through this will be the up to date church in the valley, with the exception of a cupola and bell.

Richard Layton is so happy since last Thursday, that I am told he winks both eyes now, he ought to anyway, for its a bouncing baby girl and come to stay.

The epidemic of throat troubles has continued to this writing, and many suffer severely from it. Its ill effects in most cases continue a long time.

The idea of simplifying correspondence by the omission of Mr. Esq., Hon., in addresses, as well as, Dear Sir, Yours Truly, in letters is making some progress. The more one thinks of it the more they will find to commend in it. The address of a letter or parcel is but a direction to aid in postal delivery, and anything more than the name and destination is superfluous. The Dear Sir, and Yours Truly are abbreviations of the old time long and cumbersome forms then considered correct, but which now appear perfectly ridiculous. Time and space are of value in this rapid age, and while the terms mentioned do not in themselves convey any sense of courtesy their omission would soon make them seem as they are only an incumbrance and their usage no discourtesy.

A few of our young men seem to be spoiling for a fight. I came near writing it young gentlemen, but concluded that would be stretching courtesy to a point that would be painful. Perhaps it would be for their eternal welfare if they should run up against some obstruction that would bring them to their senses should they have any. Something like the manager of the merry-go-round did up in Montague, you know. All jokes aside though this continual yawning and talking fight gives one a tired feeling. In it gentlemen who engage in this business anyway? Boys take my advice and play gentleman while instead of playing ruffian. It will strike the audience more pleasantly. Sure.

Your department, "Letters from the people," can not be interesting to your readers, and should be beneficial to the paper itself. Last week "Fair Play" made it plain that he has some very pertinent facts at his finger tips, as well as some established principles upon which to base his arguments. If the people feel greatly indebted to some particular person, then it is all right to repay by giving public office especially when it is prized as compensation. But I do not like to see the recipient of such favor demand a continuance of it indefinitely. That constitutes a chronic office seeker. In the ideal republic it certainly is an ideal practice for the office to seek the man, nor should the man make himself offensively conspicuous at that. "Fair Play" evidently believes J. M. Bensley has offended in this respect, at least.

We notice in Montague items last week that "Dick" says the PIKE COUNTY PRESS improves with age. Indeed it is quite a lusty infant. Remember this is only volume 1, and No. 52. But it has a live editor you know, and everybody wants to read it. That stimulates both editor and correspondents, and they are all determined it shall continue to improve, so just tell your friends to come off those old foggy papers, subscribe at once, and get their share of the good things that are coming in the Press. News every week, and no mistake. Get into the procession.

The gentleman who took the honey? you I heard about him. Thought he got it cheap did he? Well, perhaps it went cheap but it will come back dear enough. Sure.

PAUPAC.

(Special Correspondence to the Press.) PAUPAC, Pa., Oct. 20.—As we write the weather looks gloomy, feels chilly and reminds us that winter is approaching.

The following was copied from the Knoxville Journal: On Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th, Mrs. F. P. Grant gave a reception in honor of her niece, Miss Eunice Kimble, of Paupac, Pa. From 7.30 until 10.30 the parlors were crowded with friends. They were received in the hall by Misses Nella and Carrie Grant and Miss Kimble, in the first parlor by Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Rigg, second parlor by Misses Collins and Black and Messrs. W. W. Cleland and Thos. Helny. Four young ladies attended the tables in the dining room, so heavily laden with dainty and delicate refreshments, over which the friends tarried long after which they gave themselves up to the elegant music for which Knoxville people are so well noted. Everywhere could be seen decorations in Autumn leaves and foliage which were artistic in design and beautiful in every particular. From the center of the ceiling in the dining room were suspended yellow ribbons which were attached to two opposite corners of each table and these, together with the decorations of the sideboard, a perfect bank of foliage and flowers, made the room very beautiful and a most cheerful sight. This was the largest event in the fashionable world given this season. About one hundred guests were present. MCKINLEY.

What 30 Years of Protection Did for the United States.

In a brief review of the industrial development which has taken place since 1800, the reader must be impressed with the results which have followed the commercial policy which we have pursued. So rapid has been the growth, so great the increase, so wonderful the changes, so immense and marvelous the grand result, that it is no longer appropriate to compare the United States with any other nation or country. Only a comparison with all the rest of the world combined will give a true and proper estimate of our country's position and worth.

The population of the earth is estimated by the most reputable statisticians at 1,600,000,000. The population of the United States is now about 70,000,000. It will be seen, therefore, that we have considerable less than one twentieth of the inhabitants of the globe. According to a careful estimate made by Speaker Reed, we are equal as consumers—as a market for our own and the world production—compared with the rest of the world, to 700,000,000 people. According to Mulhall's Dictionary of Statistics, we manufacture one-third of the world's product, that is, one-half as much as all the world outside of ourselves.

We use all our manufactures or their equivalents at home. We consume one-fourth of all the sugar produced in the world, one-third of all the iron and steel, one-third of all the coffee, one-quarter of all the cotton, one-third of all the wool, nearly one-half of all the coal, one-half of all the tin plate, one-third of all the meat, and one-third of all the grain. We raise twice as much cotton and ten times as much corn as the remainder of the world put together. We produce one-third of the world's production of gold and silver. We have one-third of the world's steam power. We have one-half of the railroads on the face of the earth. We grant twice as many patents annually as all the rest of the world. One-third the wealth accumulated by the whole world is acquired by the United States. While the debt of the rest of the world increased during the decade from 1880 to 1890 over $1,000,000,000, the debt of the United States during the same period decreased by exactly that amount. The per capita debt of the rest of the world in 1890 was $32.28, ours only $14.24, less than one-half. And best of all, there are more farms and homes owned by the workmen of the United States to-day than are owned by all the laborers of the rest of the world combined.

Death Takes a Family.

In less than four weeks death has taken a whole family at May's Landing, N. J., in a very mysterious way. Four weeks ago a baby son of Harry Ingersoll died, and within a week Mr. Ingersoll himself, who had been in the best of health, was buried. Yesterday his young widow, who had moved to Williamstown after her husband's death, died, and her body was brought here for burial. She was a robust young woman and the picture of health. The sudden deaths have created great surprise, as the nature of the disease does not seem to be known.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Under this head we will insert communications on current and political topics, without being responsible for the sentiments expressed, and invite such discussion as may be proper and of general interest to the people.—EDITOR PRESS.

GREENTOWN, Oct. 20, 1906.

MR. EDITOR.—Allow me a little space in your correspondent's column that I may give some of the views of the people in this section in the Commissioner's matter. We have a man here who has been placed in nomination for that office under the title "People's Party." He is a Republican and always has been. George H. Bortree was born here and for fifty years the citizens of this section have known him as an upright, honest business man above all reproach. He is a man unacquainted with the tricks and frauds which often result in nominations, and he would not stoop to chicanery to accomplish any such purpose. The nomination by the Republicans of Mr. Bensley was planned by some of the would-be leaders a year in advance and they were aided by local candidates in several townships, who while ostensibly aspirants were really in Bensley's interest. The delegates were elected at such times and places as best suited their purpose and convenience of the man to be nominated, and I am informed that he, in several instances, had charge of the notices to be posted instead of having them sent to the township committees: Why was not the time for holding the several township caucuses fixed on the same day and notices duly given through the Press so that all Republicans might know it? What is our paper for if not to convey such party information to the voters? And, Mr. Editor were you asked to do it? Certainly the widest publicity should have been given to the meetings, and this could not be done by a few notices posted up in obscure places in the townships. I do not believe that these underhand methods are pursued by either party in any other county in the State, and no party can hope to succeed long which practices them.

I have long known Mr. Bortree and can assure the people that if they elect him he will inaugurate such reforms in the office as may be proper and right and in the matter of compensation to those officials whose salaries he would aid in fixing, he would deal justly and in the interest of the taxpayers. Nor do I think he could ever be persuaded to sell a horse to a bridge agent for a fancy price as I am told has been done heretofore. We will roll up such a vote for Bortree in this township as never was known before. We are no longer willing to be bound by strict party ties, and totally disregard the qualifications and character of the men seeking office.

A FAIR PLAY DEMOCRAT.

DUNSMITH FERRY, Oct. 21, 1906.

TO THE PRESS.—We had an avalanche of candidates this week. Farmers in this section will be busy cutting spokes from the wheel of office seekers on election day. Party lines have vanished on that score. Every body seems to be happy here in this part of the "one green spot." The Republicans, because their prospects are bright, and the Democrats, because it is funny, but it is a deal that way for if they get beat they will be better off. E. F. U.

ITEMS OF INTEREST.

It is well known among oculist experts that the opera glasses which may be hired in most theatres frequently become the medium for spreading very serious eye diseases.

A new method of stopping hiccoughs is said to have been discovered in a French hospital. It consists in thrusting the tongue out of the mouth and hold it thus for a short time.

Many undertakers are now using cheap coffins pressed out of paper pulp. When polished and stained such coffins look almost as well as those of wood. They last longer in the ground than coffins of wood or metal, and they can be hermetically sealed better than heavy metal ones.

The Chinese send three invitations to the guests that they desire to see at their great feast. The first is dispatched two days before the feast, the second on the day itself, in order to remind those they have invited of their engagement, and the third just before the hour has arrived, so as to show how impatient they are to see their friends arrive.

It is not generally known that the remains of all the Czars of Russia since Peter the Great lie in a Memorial Chapel built on one of the islands of the Neva. All the cenotaphs are exactly alike, being a block of white marble without any decoration whatever. The only distinction by which each one is marked is the name of the deceased Emperor.

A strange custom is still observed in Rottmania which reminds one strongly of Robinson Crusoe. When a servant has displeased his or her master the offender takes his boots in his hands and places them before the bedroom door of his master. It is a sign of great submission, and the boots are either kicked away, as an intimation that the fault will not be forgiven, or else the servant is told to place them on his feet, which shows that he is forgiven.
